Dear Chancellor,

My paper: Banks Create Money and what to do about it.

I believe the power and authority to create sterling should be taken away from the commercial banks and given to the people, with the Bank of England and the elected government acting in the interests of society and as our servants in this regard.

This seems to me a step that is essential to the economic welfare of our nation and to its mission in the world.

I would be most grateful to you for your response to the thesis that I present in the above paper and in Youtube videos which can be accessed at the following url:

<http://thecommongood.info/domestic-issues/banks/>

On that page are to be found a link in bold type of the above wording leading to the text of the paper as a pdf and also some videos: three by me (an introduction, a full statement of the monetary reform thesis as I understand it and an item about the history of the Pennsylvania Settlers' monetary system) and one by 12 year old Canadian Victoria Grant made under other auspices but in tune with my thesis.

The remedy for the current disadvantageous situation is most precisely presented in the wording of a draft Bill prepared by the group Positive Money and visible at:

<http://www.positivemoney.org.uk/wp-content/uploads/2012/02/Bank-of-England-Creation-of-Currency-Bill-Smaller.pdf>

Will you present this draft Bill to parliament as soon as possible?

With good wishes

Yours sincerely

Leader: The Common Good party.
